Elderly and Disabled to Suffer Under New Medicaid Bill

YONKERS, , NY -- February 8, 2006 -- Thousands of low-income and elderly New Yorkers will have to pay more for health care under a new bill just approved by the House of Representatives. Some will have to drop out of Medicaid completely because of the higher co-payments and premiums.

Now cleared by Congress (the bill has already been approved in the Senate), President George Bush is expected to sign the Medicaid eligibility requirements into law today as part of the larger Deficit Reduction Act. The approved legislation will impose punitive restrictions on any American who applies for federal Medicaid assistance to pay for nursing home expenses.

"It is now more important than ever for older generations who might need nursing home care to plan ahead for their future healthcare and financial needs," commented Bernard A. Krooks, founding partner of Littman Krooks LLP and President of the National Academy of Elder Law Attorneys, New York Chapter.

"The Baby Boomer generation will have to adjust their financial planning strategy if they want to protect future charitable opportunities. Under this law, older Americans will be penalized for providing their grandchildren with assistance for college or helping their children with a down-payment on a new home. Everything is fair game."

Bernard Krooks, the NY Chapter president of the National Academy of Elder Law Attorneys, will be in Eastchester, New York, tomorrow speaking to the Yonkers Lawyers Association. The presentation will be
